Rebecca Morley, National Center for Healthy Housing (NCHH)

Rebecca Morley is the executive director of NCHH, where she lead its multi-disciplinary staff in creating healthy and safe housing for children through practical and proven steps. She led the development of the National Healthy Homes Training Center and spearheaded NCHH's work in the Gulf Coast following Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. She has authored numerous articles and publications on the topic of housing-related health hazards. She also worked for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, where she developed lead paint regulations and managed an array of children's environmental health projects. She served on the President's Task Force for Children's Environmental Health and Safety and contributed to HUD's preliminary Healthy Homes Initiative plan and Strategic Plan to Eliminate Childhood Lead Poisoning by 2010. Ms. Morley also served as a legislative fellow to U.S. Senator Jack Reed, where she authored key components of the Kennedy Health Bill related to childhood lead poisoning and helped to establish a national childhood lead poisoning prevention week through a Senate resolution. She serves on the Board of the National Disease Clusters Alliance and on the Howard County Environmental and Sustainability Commission.

Healthy Homes, Healthy Families

A Summit for Municipal Leaders
March 12, 2009 | Fitchburg, MA

Homes should be safe havens for families. Sadly, it is the place where children are most likely to be injured or become ill.

Every year in the U.S. there are:

- Over 13 million home injuries
- Nearly 3,000 deaths due to house fires
- Two million emergency room visits for asthma
- An estimated 250,000 children with elevated blood lead levels

With both our housing and health care sectors in crisis, there is a critical need to tackle the preventable disease and injury caused by unhealthy housing and neighborhood conditions. Learn how to create healthier, sustainable homes in your community and find out about several new laws that were enacted in Massachusetts last year, including the Green Communities Act, the Green Jobs Act, and the Global Warming Solutions Act.
